

FOOLS GARDEN

PRESSINFO

When Peter Freudenthaler and Volker Hinkel founded their Fools Garden in the German town Pforzheim in 1991, they did not suspect that their musical plants would be world-famous a few years later. They attained first national attention with their song „Wild Days“, which was used in an advertising spot for „C&A“.

But the real wild days began with „Lemon Tree“. The „Lemon Tree from the Black Forest“ has fascinated the whole world since 1995. The song was translated into over 40 languages and achieved a sales quota of over six million units.

With „Lemon Tree“ the band Fools Garden grew up to be one of the „Big Ones“ in the world wide music business. Since then Fools Garden has played concerts around the whole world. In May 2005 they played their biggest concert until now in Kalingrad (Russia) in front of over 100.000 spectators.

Fools Garden has always made a point of leading their career on their own. All Fools Garden songs are own-written and since 2003 they have also run their own label. With „Lemonade Music“ Fools Garden became independent of calendars and expectations of others. Since 2003 they also have new band members on board. The first album of the new band „Welcome to the real Life“ was released in 2005. For many fans and critics it is the best Fools Garden album.

So far Fools Garden published six albums, which contain many international radio hits. While songs like „Wild Days“, „Suzy“, „It Can Happen“, „Probably“ or „Why did she go“ jumped into the German charts, tracks like „Closer“, „Dreaming“ and „Does anybody know“ became popular in Russia.

In spite of all the success Fools Garden has always kept the direct contact to their fans in the whole world. In the World-Wide-Web the band is present in all large communities like MySpace. The band writes newsletters and even offers its own podcast, in which the bandleaders Peter Freudenthaler and Volker Hinkel regularly report from their studio in Pforzheim.
